Do you ever wonder why you came to Newton?
Do you ever wonder why you stayed?

Perhaps we came here to learn everything — but slowly found that a good measurement of what we know is our realization of how much more there is to learn. We thought, worried, discussed —

and sometimes just let ourselves be . . .

. . . and maybe that was most important.

We came to learn —
from books, teachers, classes —
but more than that . . .

. . . we came to discover ourselves, alone or with each other. And in the search we realized the part of ourselves that is our work and the part of our work that is ourselves.

The unpredictable became the accepted . . .

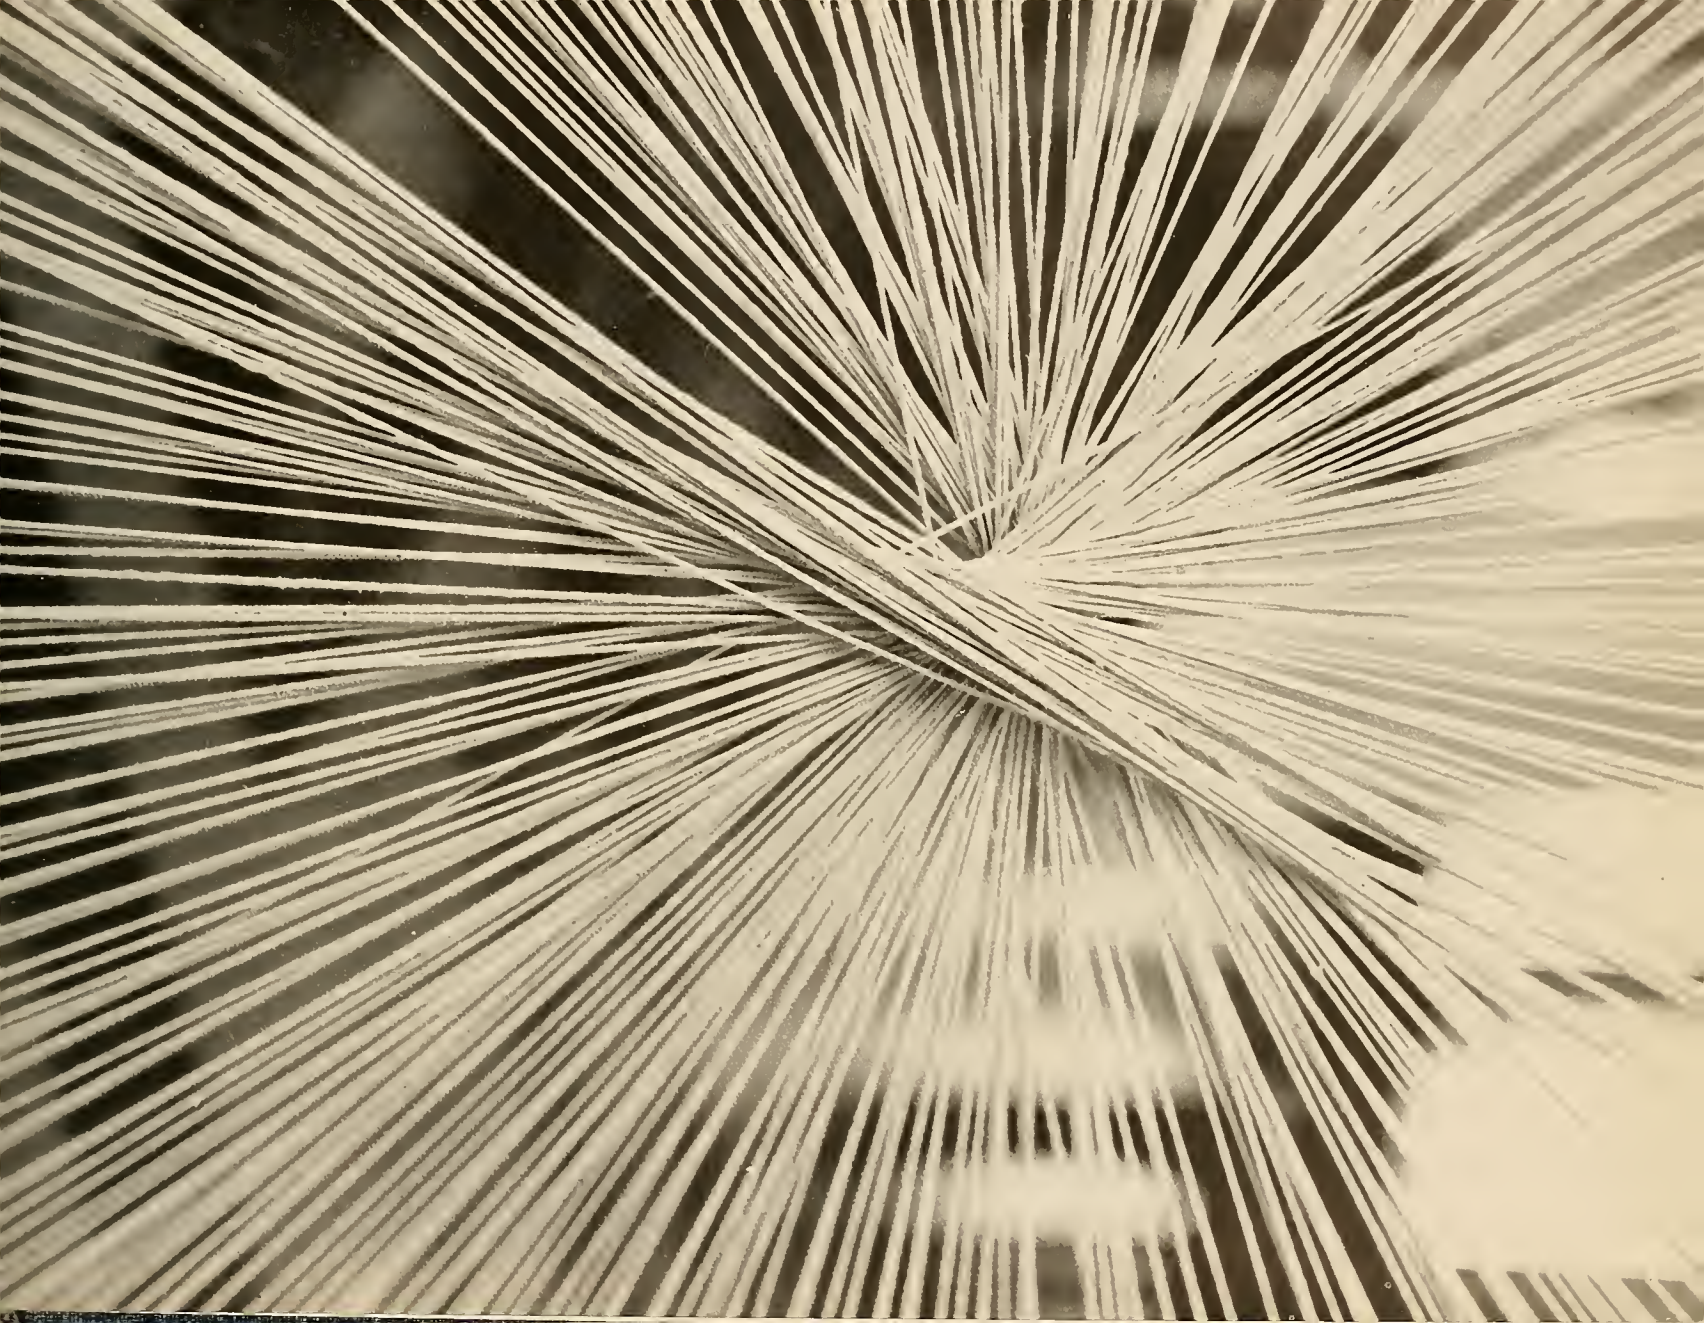

. . . the acceptable was lost in laughter.

We came to Newton wondering what to expect,
and we leave questioning what we found . . .

A college can never be expressed
in one thought, one word, one picture, one book.
Sometimes Newton was a blur of days and nights,
of crowds and solitude, of gaiety and reflection.
Other times a single event captured
the spirit of an entire semester.
Gradually, suddenly, a year ended and you realized that perhaps you knew very little yet somehow you understood.

The past is a foreign country.
They do things differently there.

You close this time of questioning as one leaving a cherished friend
You leave something behind here, but the seeds will take root
And grow to shade you on your journey to an inner-outer space
Where sky meets land and Knowledge grows as one with understanding.
